John:

I appreciate your frustration over the developing situation in Central and South America and can well appreciate the agony which NOVA faces in determining where to go from here. You are not alone in your concerns as a number of institutions and corporations face the same dilemma. We can't offer specific recommendations as to which way you should go. The U.S. has a policy, of course, of encouraging investment in that area.

Wish we could be of more help and maybe Senator Durenberger can offer you some more specific guidance.

Regards,
